The Chautauque is the most enjoyable entertainment that ever came to Maysville.

Mr. W. H. Loman and wife have purchased of the Roser estate a two-story brick dwelling in Short street, between Second and Third.

NO STAMPEDE EXPECTED
BALTIMORE, June 26th.—It is realized by all that the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate in the convention can only be secured by a combination of some of the candidates or by a "break" or "stampede" of the delegates. The various leaders are firm in the belief there will be no stampede and say they do not even fear Mr. Bryan himself in that respect.

Stock Reducing

Is now what clothing dealers are striving for. Whilst it is a little early in the season to reduce prices, we find it expedient to begin now. The remarkable cool spring has doubtless retarded the ready-to-wear clothing business somewhat. Many of you are yet open for your spring suit. Here is an opportunity to save money. To provide work for our tailors we will make to order in our shop a limited number of Coat and Pants for $30. See the material in our East window. The fabrics are from the celebrated house of E. H. VanIngen & Co.

REDUCED PRICES ON White Serge Suits

The lively demand for White Serge Suits has reduced our stock to a mere hint of its former size, so the price like the number goes down to the vanishing point. With the exception of one, as mentioned below, the suits are all this season's and as spic-and-span as when hung in the case.

$25 White Serge with tan hairline stripes $10. Not this season's.
White Serge with black hairline stripes. $25 Suits $17½. $22½ Suits $15. $15 Suits $10.
White Serge either strictly tailored or trimmed in black or trimmed in white. $25 Suits $19½. $28 Suits $17½. $15 Suits $10.
$25 White Serge $15. One suit has heavy lace collar and cuffs with under-lay of primrose satin. Another suit has delicate blue agaric collar and trimmings of large and small ivory bullet buttons.

DRESSES at $4.98; Formerly $6½ and $7½.

DRESSES at $3.98, Formerly $5 and $6.

Every dress greets you with the assurance it belongs to the season of 1912. Not one in the lot soiled or shop worn. All are fresh as the most fastidious woman can demand. Too many—that is the whole story of the price cut. The styles are so varied individual description is impossible, but as a general outline will mention lace and embroidery, panels, medallions, dainty tucks and soft white lingerie cloth. They are dresses you will be eager to own and they are reduced while three months of wearing time is still ahead.

The inauguration of the Redpath Chautauque at Maysville yesterday was quite a success, considering the threatening skies.

Superintendent T. M. Cornsillon is in personal charge of the meeting and is well fitted to make it a success.

The immense tent and all paraphernalia are new, the seats are comfortable and the stage well equipped with piano and other accessories while the lighting at night is superb.

Judge Blair of Adams county fame, spoke on "A Lesson to a Nation," and while it was a great effort, the Judge seemed to be talking in behalf of Roosevelt and Bryan.

The Ladies' Spanish Orchestra, was the delight of the afternoon and evening, assisted by H. V. Benjamin, baritone.

Officer Omar Fizer and Jacob Nash Come Together—Matters Will Be Settled in Court

Yesterday noon an encounter occurred between Officer Omar Fizer and Jacob Nash in Market street in which the former received a dangerous stab to the abdomen at the hands of the latter, and Nash being promptly knocked down by Fizer with his billy.

After receiving surgical attention from Dr. Brand the wounded officer retired to his room where he is likely to be confined for several days.

Nash was arrested on a warrant sworn out in 'Spire Rosser's Court charging cutting with intent to kill, and was held over in the sum of $200 for appearance at an examining trial.

There are two sides to the unfortunate occurrence and the true facts in the case will be developed when the matter comes up before 'Spire Rosser for trial. Nash gave bond with J. H. Pollitt as surety.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN.

It is history that men in great national crises seldom know where they are or whether they go. There have been exceptions, but they have been small and few.

The Arch Demagogue
Of Modern History.

Usually men glide from the smooth stream of current events into the heaving rapids of change almost without apprehension, pause for a moment perhaps in wonder on the verge of the cataract, and first awake, if they awake at all, battling for existence in the wild waters below.

So easy is the transition from peace and order to uprising and revolution, so thoughtless are the most of us until the torch burns or the knife drops, that when governments fall or governments change they seem almost to come and go by magic. Liberty passes as a dream in the night; the thief breaks in and steals—and all so easily and naturally that we are roused only when property slips away or life hangs by a thread.

For the first time in American history there comes knocking and bellowing at the door a man who demands, actually demands, that the dominant party of the country give him, for the third time, against all saving tradition and sober precedent, the Presidency of the United States—give it to him, as far as in that party lies, and and leave it to him—who doubts the fact?—as long as he sees fit to use or abuse it!

Passion-mad, drunk with egotism, insane for power, sneering at restraint, reviling every man and measure of law that stands in the way of his frenzy, bellowing "thief," "robber" and "traitor" at all who refuse to yield the office to his grasp, stigmatizing the President of the United States as a "receiver of stolen goods" because the President does not yield to him his desire, commanding, threatening, denouncing, calling up the mob to be his aid, haranguing whosoever will hear him in the language of the gun man and the street brawler—this two-time Chief Magistrate of a great republic batters at the gateway of present opportunity and virtually invokes the lynch law of the populace to tear coveted honor from the conventions hands and deliver it to him as a spoil of riot and a trophy of mob rule!

Do benefactors of a nation come thus? Do true reformers come thus? Do unselfish patriots come thus? Do statesman, or self-respecting politicians, or even self-respecting gentlemen, come thus?

No! They never have—they never will! Search the history of all nations! Search the history of this Republic! And from 1776 to this date none who meant well by the Republic, none who meant well by his fellow-man, none who meant well by anybody but himself, has come thus! And yet, striking with clenched fist at the doorway of the convention, he declares in stentorian tones that he will not be "robbed"—that is, that he will have the nomination, that he will not allow the majority of the delegates to vote their choice for his opponent, that he will drag from that convention the opportunity to lay his violent hands on the Chief Magistracy of this nation!

Thus far has this Brawler and Usurper come in his purpose, in his plot, to thwart the orderly processes of the nation, to frustrate the decent procedure of the dominant party and to force his rulership upon the American people! Thus far has he come, always professing the benefactor and reformer, acting alternately as the people's suppliant and the popular tyrant, but always the demagogue, the lever and the eventual autoerast. Now creeping and crawling through some sem of socialistic favor, reviling the rich and spitting upon the law; again striking hands with Harriman and replenishing his campaign fund from the Wall street millions; now assailing property rights and their guarantees under the Constitution; again pressing acquiescence to the limit in amalgamating the Steel corporation and the Tennessee Coal and Iron company; now calling upon heaven to witness his lawless hatred of malefactors of great wealth and again taking to his bosom the malefactors who would be tributary to his thirst for power; twisting, turning, dodging, cringing in private then blustering, threatening, bellowing, posing in public—thus he has come to where he is—and for what purpose? Who, sane and in his right mind, dare say that a man come thus, ever has come thus, ever will come thus, for any but the malignest reasons, for any but the worst purposes, from any except the greediest motives and the darkest ambitions?

For such a man no limit of ambition exists—neither in scruple nor conscience, neither in experience or education. Once President, he would be there for life. He has no other aim—he would be the American Diaz at best—at worst, God alone knows. In either event there would be the death of our liberties.

The danger is so monstrous that no appeal seems adequate. The peril is so clear to all who see that no warning seems sufficiently solemn. The hour is so grave that the words do not come to impress on the delegates now in this city the momentous nature of the duty before them.

By Buicker Hill and Yorktown, where Americans took liberty as their own and as no autoerast's boon; by Gettysburg and Appomattox, where they kept as their own what had been earned and intrusted to them; by the calm warnings of Washington and the prophetic wisdom of Hamilton; by the thunders of Webster and the lightning flashes of Calhoun; by the humble counsels of Lincoln, by the blood of all the patriot martyrs unselfishly shed to secure a perpetual Republic, by all the soldiers, statesmen, patriots and martyrs who have feared for us this very danger to come, by the warnings of every scourge of foreign history, by the signs and crimes of a Napoleon, by the omens of the present and by the admonitions of the past—by these heritages and memories, and by the word of all those called to serve this country up to the day when Theodore Roosevelt came, let every delegate to the convention now at hand who knows his country and loves it, feels its spirits and thrills with it, sees the needs and trembles for it, rise to the utter height of his American manhood and resolve that not through his negligence, not with his consent, not under his tolerance, not by his silence, and only against the protests of his whole strength and being, shall this Scourge of the Republic be permitted to deal his foul blow to the one great and enduring government of the people, for the people by the people, that the world has seen.

Giff Pinchot is so busy playing politics that he hasn't had time to attend to conserving our volcanoes in Alaska.—Washington Post.

"Any Democrat can win," says Norman E. Mack. Which brings us back to the old, familiar question: "What is a Democrat?"

The Colonels Armageddon fight was fought with a display of cash rarely equaled in this world. It was a contest of "wads." The Colonel should go out of the Armageddon warfare. He does not seem to understand it.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Georgé W. Perkins says that nobody dare steal a red-hot stove under the eyes of 90,000,000 Americans. Maybe not. But if the Harvester Trust would not it would not be because of any well-grounded fear that its reputation would be injured.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ANOTHER BANK FAILURE.

"Shameless hussy! Good enough for her!" cried Prissy Primim.
"Who? What?" asked Pert Penelope.
"Why," said Prissy, "that Mrs. Gaddy, while trying to show off her embroidered hose, carried her skirts so high that some one picked her stocking."

Historic
BlackguardsBy
Albert Payson TerhuneHenry VIII, the King With Six Wives

THIS is the story of a king who, for 15 years of his reign was one of the best and greatest monarchs in all history; and who, during his last 20 years was a monster. He was HENRY VIII, Henry VIII, of England. Henry's father had educated him for the priesthood, when his elder brother, Arthur, died; thus making Henry heir to the English throne. Arthur had been married to Catherine of Aragon, who brought him a dowry of 200,000 crowns. Sooner than to return this large dowry, the miserly old king married Catherine to Henry. She was some years older than her boy husband and a totally unfit wife for such a youth.

In 1509 Henry VIII became king. He was eighteen years old and the most popular man in his kingdom. Handsome, athletic, jolly, clever, he was the exact opposite of his miser father. England was weak from long civil wars and bad rule. She had sunk almost to the level of a third rate power.

Henry quickly changed all this. With splendid statesmanship he steadily lifted his country to a foremost rank among Europe's nations. He won victories against French and Scottish foes. Education and commerce thrived. The land was rich and happy. For writing a church book Henry received from the pope the title of "Defender of the Faith." A prosperous, contented nation, daily increasing in greatness, was ruled by a wise, just and beloved king.

So much for the first 15 years. Then came the change—a change that turned a hero king into a blackguard. A change no historian has been able to explain. It was caused in the first place by a woman.

Henry's wife, Catherine of Aragon, was growing old. He was still in his prime. She was homely, severe, solemn—his opposite in all things. They had had two sons, who had died in earliest infancy. Their only living child was a sickly daughter (who later became Queen Mary). Henry, up to this time, had treated his elderly wife kindly enough. There was no stain on his private life. His morals were unusually good, his career free from scandal. But, after nearly a score of years on the throne, he suddenly fell in love with Anne Boleyn, one of Catherine's ladies-in-waiting. Anne was beautiful, weak, vicious; she was decidedly attractive in spite of the fact that she had two thumbs on each hand.

Henry wished to marry her. He declared that his early marriage to his brother's widow was illegal, and sought to have it annulled.

The pope refused to sanction so wicked a plan. Henry, thereupon, threw aside his allegiance to the Catholic church and to the pope, and declared himself the head of all religious institutions in England. Then he proceeded to modify his country's religion and to believe all who would conform to his new way of thinking. He also abolished England's peaceful monasteries. Catholics who remained loyal to their church and to the pope were slain without mercy or justice. Protestants who objected to Henry's regulations were also put to death. Any man who crossed the monarch's wishes or ideas was executed. Whole families were killed for no better reason than that they obeyed their own consciences rather than the unjust orders of a tyrant. By Catholics and Protestants alike Henry grew to be loathed. His early popularity was drowned in oceans of innocent blood, shed at his cruel orders. Where once he had governed by love he now ruled by inspiring death fears. Some writers say that no less than 73,000 persons were executed during the last 20 years of Henry's reign. This is, perhaps, an exaggeration. But the victims could be numbered by thousands. The once genial, gracious sovereign had become a monster.

Anno Boleyn profited little by her marriage with Henry. Not long after the birth of her daughter (afterward Queen Elizabeth), she was suspected of unfaithfulness and was beheaded by Henry's orders. Next day he married Anne's lady-in-waiting, Jane Seymour. Jane died soon after the birth of her son, Edward. Henry then married Anne of Cleves, a Flemish princess, whom he had never seen. At first sight he fell into a rage, cursed her for a hideous "Flanders mare," and divorced her. Soon afterward he married Catherine Howard. Doubting her loyalty to him, he had her put to death and married his sixth wife, Catherine Parr.

How much oftener he might have gone to the altar, had he lived long enough, cannot be guessed. Ill-health had already begun to disfigure his handsome face, cripple his body and make life an agony for him. On January 28, 1547, he died, in his fifty-sixth year, unmourned, hated; his very memory a thing of horror.

SQUARE TUBING

Do you see how the square cross-rod at top of head and foot beautifully fits bed? Imagine this design with round tubing in those positions. Would not the result be "ordinary" and monotonous?

It is just such details of clever and artistic designing that have made our steel beds so popular. And the very large corner posts with brass caps all combine to make this an unusually artistic bed.

Moreover this bed is as good as it looks. Because it is made of heavy steel tubing, very light in weight—extremely strong.

A child can move this bed with the greatest ease. Come in and see this bed. Then you will realize how good it is.

FAST STEAMBOAT LINE

Pina Dream of a Revival of Good Times on the Ohio

A fast freight and passenger steamboat line between Huntington and Cincinnati is being organized by Captain Rube Burasido.

This line will no doubt pay big dividends, providing a great volume of business could be secured that is now controlled by the C. & O. and N. & W. Railroads, and that also the line could own its wharves, including a terminal at Cincinnati. Such a line would cost a fortune to equip.

Captain Burasido will place his project before the Huntington Chamber of Commerce on next Friday night.

Captain Burasido's plans are to have a fast boat leave Huntington every evening, arriving at Cincinnati the next morning, and arriving at Huntington the next night.

DOING THEIR DUTY

SCORES OF MAYSVILLE READERS ARE LEARNING THE DUTY OF THE KIDNEYS

To filter the blood is the kidney's duty. When they fail to do this the kidneys are weak.

Backache and other kidney ills may follow. Help the kidneys do their work. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy.

Proof of their worth in the following: A. Soria, locksmith, Aberdeen, O., says: "My experience with Doan's Kidney Pills leads me to recommend them for cases of backache and weak kidneys. The action of my kidneys were irregular and the kidney secretions contained sediment. I had backache and when stooping it was difficult for me to straighten. Cold always settled on my kidneys. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they stopped the trouble and my kidneys became strong."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs

AT MAMMOTH CAVE.

REPORT OF MEETING READ TO MAYSVILLE CLUB BY MRS. STANLEY F. REED AND MRS. LESLIE WORTHINGTON, DELEGATES.

The Federation Daily, edited by Mrs. J. J. Dickey each day on the grounds, is the official report of the convention. Articles will be read to the club from it from time to time until all are heard.

This report is intended to give that more intimate and personal view as it impressed your delegates venturing for the first time into the club world.

The report follows:

On the morning of May 27th, your newly escaped delegates, timid and fearful of captivity, journeyed to Cincinnati. Once settled in the train for Glasgow Junction, we composed ourselves and tarred our thoughts to the quest of that larger knowledge for which we thirsted. At Covington a delegation came on, and at Louisville another coach full was attached. So we landed at Glasgow Junction about two hundred strong, and all in high feather. All apparently as well pleased with their "escape" as we were.

From there we traveled on a little dummy train at a leisurely gait of about nine miles an hour, through beautiful scenery to the Mammoth Cave. There we were met by some kindly looking mountaineers, with the Mammoth Cave ox wagons, on which about two hundred suit cases and a few trunks were soon piled. We walked through the grounds, which are natural woods, slightly improved, to the hotel, an old rambling part log building, apparently about a hundred years old, but attractive in its rough quaintness, where we were all very comfortable.

We were met by Mrs. James Mitchell of Bowling Green, an energetic and vivacious lady, who seemed to be the "Entertainment Committee," and who is largely responsible for the present movement to have the Mammoth Cave and its surrounding territory made a National Reservation, she having been born and reared near the Cave.

After supper there was a session of the Presidents of Clubs in the ballroom upstairs. Meanwhile, the long old porch presented an animated and picturesque scene of great informality, with the meeting of old acquaintances and new. Some gayly dressed young girls and children served fruit punch, and flitted here and there bearing messages, etc., in their capacity as pages, together with the many running lither and thither in the rough cave costume of bloomers and blouse, as the guides rounded the "All out for the Cave," at the farther end of the porch. While seated at little tables all along and in this throng were many Chairmen of State Departments, and other officers, including the Press Committee, all intent on the fast little details and reports and changes to their forthcoming reports and papers, with hardly time to take their hats off; for it was soon apparent that the success of the Kentucky State Federation Convention rested on a few earnest self-sacrificing souls, and well did they sustain it.

The personality of the officers and Chairmen of Departments was extremely interesting to us as newcomers. They were, with a few exceptions, middle aged and elderly women, plain, gentle, motherly, refined and good to look at, some of them grandmothers and veterans in the cause, and the moving spirits in many of the latter day reforms which, for the first time, we traced to their proper source.

Your delegates were profoundly impressed with the splendid possibilities and power of organized Christian womanhood as evidenced in this convention. No Church or sect was mentioned, but it was at once evident that it was a deeply religious body, all dedicated to the service of God in the beauty of holiness, and latent in stamping out vice, cruelty, injustice and ignorance wherever found, and helping those who are unable to help themselves. Their aims seemed to be elevated, unselfish, almost entirely free from personal considerations, and characterized by a uniform courtesy and forbearance, together with a consideration for and confidence in each other, delightful to see. If there existed then, or had ever existed, any animosities or bickerings, nothing akin to it appeared at this convention, and so it was demonstrated that women can organize as well as men, and rise superior to those little misapprehensions that are sometimes supposed to be peculiarly feminine.

Tuesday evening nominating ballots were distributed for the election of Third and Fourth Vice Presidents, Recording Secretary and Treasurer and Auditor, and Wednesday Mrs. Morris Bartlett of Lawrenceburg and Miss Laura Clay of Lexington were elected Third and Fourth Vice Presidents, respectively, and Mrs. James Mitchell of Bowling Green, Recording Secretary, Miss Rebecca Averill of Frankfort, Treasurer, and Mrs. Thibout of Owensboro, Auditor, all being then officers serving in other capacities. There did not seem to be any canvassing or wire pulling, certainly not with your delegates. We soon judged of the fitness and popularity of the various nominees for ourselves, and voted accordingly, and so it happened our selections were elected.

The sessions were held in the hall room on the second floor, beginning at 9 a. m. and holding until 1 p. m. each day. Then again at 2 p. m. and never adjourning until after 5, or sometimes 6.

In the evening there were addresses by sundry persons, including Mr. Allen, Pure Food Commissioner, Miss Alice Lasky of New York, Secretary of the National Consumers' League, Miss East, a Social Settlement worker of New York, and Miss Hamilton, Field Worker from Chautauqua, and our own Mrs. Desha Breckinridge, Miss Laura Clay and Dr. Lillian South, not forgetting a charming talk from Miss Mary Fithian Hatchcraft of Paris.

The last night wound up in a blaze of glory in every way. There was a banquet in the rotunda of the cave, given the Federation by the management, at which the guest of honor was Miss Alice Lasky of New York, who, previous to her enlistment in the cause of pure food, was a singer of more than local fame. She sang several songs in the cave, including "My Old Kentucky Home," in the chorus of which the entire assembly joined.

The rotunda was illuminated by a system of acetylene gas or gasoline lights, which above its sculptured walls and grandeur as in no other part of the cave. There were five or six tables, each about as long as a Pullman car, and still only a portion of the spot space was utilized. Toasts were drunk in water, with enthusiastic responses and reminiscences of the cave from some of the descendants of those who formerly owned or were interested in the property. This display of feminine eloquence daily as inspired the Superintendent that he made a little speech. The corps of darky waiters were called on for a song, but proved the day of plantation melodies is over, for they "didn't have their music." Finally there was a return to the hotel and a hasty scramble into evening clothes to do justice to the choice program provided for the last evening.

First there was a stereopticon lecture by Dr. Lillian South, State Bacteriologist, a very handsome young woman in a superb evening toilet, who in terms of scientific accuracy, demonstrated the fearful penalties of vice, showing how the sins of the fathers may be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. When the lights were turned down, there was a noise of many hoarse feet trooping in, and just before they were turned on again, the same noise of heavy feet going out. It was said to be the male guests and employees of the hotel. It seemed a pity the whole Kentucky Legislature should not have been there.

Then followed one of the amusing things of the convention. A mere man, who had been invited (or given permission) to address the convention on the afternoon of the first day it met, and had not materialized until that evening, when the program was already laid out, overflew with the final addresses and last plans, suddenly appeared to make an address, (the subject of which never has become clear to your delegates, although he talked two hours). It was said that he was there because he favored equal rights for women, but if so, surely he was a wolf in sheep's clothing, for he seemed and patronized those awkward, hand-drawn the same state bouquets and the same old threadbare advice that would have been thought tiresome twenty-five years ago. (He seemed to think he was invited merely because he was a man, and that as such anything he might say would be received with appreciation.) It was an enjoyable thing to watch the faces of the President and other officers and speakers on the platform, as their polite attention turned to fatigue, their anxiety and concern, changing swiftly to consternation and dismay, followed finally by an expression of sublime resignation, as they settled themselves to make a night of it, while he divided and subdivided his text, rounded out a peroration after another, and as a lady nearby expressed it "took a whack at the whole world." As he expanded under the applause which followed points which were mistakenly supposed to mean the finish was at night, he seemed so happy in the knowledge that he had the undivided attention of about two hundred women who couldn't very well get away, that time doubtless passed swiftly to him, until suddenly, after talking about two hours, he turned to the President with "Have I taken up enough of my time, Mr. Smith?" The lady forever demonstrated her fitness to preside over any assembly when, with an expression of indescribable sweetness, graciousness and fine courtesy, she replied: "You have a few minutes more, Mr. Blank." He took them. Finally he finished about 10 o'clock, and retired to sleep the sleep of the just without even waiting to hear the three really brilliant women speakers who followed him. Program:

DEPARTMENTS.

At first one may be disposed to wonder what a federation of Women's Club needs so many departments for, but we propose to let them speak for themselves, through the Federation Daily and only review them briefly here.

The first one to report on Tuesday, the opening day of the Convention, was the Civil Service Department, through its Chairman, Mrs. Frank Johnson of Louisville, followed by the reports of the sub-committees. Mrs. Charles Connor Brown, on the condition of "Poor Houses and Jails"; Mrs. James A. Leach on "Asylums," and Mrs. J. J. Dickey on "Schools of Reform." It was brought out that it was largely through the efforts of Women's Clubs that many of these institutions have been taken out of politics and placed in charge of the State Board of Control and the urgent need of a woman on the boards of all institutions where women and children are confined. Blind and insane Asylums in better condition, Reform Schools, Poor Houses and Jails. It was urged that Women's Clubs investigate the sanitary conditions of these institutions not only in the case of humanity, but as a measure of public safety, as many of these inmates return to their places in the community to scatter the contagion, both physical and moral which they have perhaps helplessly contracted through their enforced association with other inmates more diseased or more depraved than themselves. Young persons imprisoned for a first offense, may be hopelessly ruined by being confined with hardened criminals. Especially shocking and painful was the discovery that the Reform Schools, where 800 children are confined, had no books or toys to entertain or instruct their spare hours.

Mrs. Dickey of Owensboro, whose beautiful personality shined through her paper on Reform Schools, which will presently be read to you, makes a heartfelt appeal for investigation into the conditions and neglect of duty on the part of parents which fill our schools of reform and closes with the warning to beware lest we Christianize the leathard and allow our own to take their places.

A paper of absorbing interest was the report sent by Miss Frances Ingram, Secretary of the Kentucky Child Labor Association, and read by Mrs. Mason Maury, recently appointed by Governor McCreary on the State Board of Forestry. In her report Miss Ingram went deeply into the question of children employed in Home Industries and Street Trades, moving picture shows, etc., dwelling especially on the dangers of night messenger service, and the fact that most of the night messenger service after 9 o'clock was the carrying of messages between dissolute men and women, and that in this way, boys were made familiar with vice, and exposed to temptations of the vilest kind, and debauched while little more than children. Mrs. Maury said that the report said the result of the investigation was "too bad to be told the convention," and she added: "Is a thing right for children to do that is too bad to be told their mothers?"

Clean moving pictures.
Cleaner stage.
Cleaner press.
Suppression of the Sunday supplement.
Against the "latest novel" habit.
Better literature.

We regret that this splendid paper, for some reason was not published in The Federation Daily.

KENTUCKY'S CHILD LABOR LAW WAS GOOD IN 1908

IT IS LAGGING BEHIND THE LAWS OF OTHER STATES IN 1912

It is of supreme importance that Kentucky conserve the strength of her children, her future citizens.

If an eight-hour day for men, why not for children under 16? New York, Ohio and Illinois are conserving the strength of their children by an eight hour law.

Street trading—selling of newspapers, peddling, selling in the market and boot blacking—leads to truancy, gambling, defiance of parental control and weakened physical condition due to excessive exposure and irregular habits. New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts refuse to allow children under 12 to be exposed to these dangers.

WHY NOT KENTUCKY?

Night messengers must be familiar with every detail of commercialized vice to hold their jobs. In New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Utah only men are permitted to do this work.

In KENTUCKY boys of 14, 15 and 16 do it. Stage children are exposed to many moral dangers. Authorities say child-actors are unnecessary to the success of a play. Early stage experience is of no value to actors. Why let the children perform? Illinois, Louisiana and Massachusetts do not.

The carelessness of children under sixteen working in mines is dangerous to the lives of the men working therein. Should Kentucky permit this?

The present child labor laws inadequate. Why not make it adequate. At the next session of the Legislature urge your Representative to vote for the amendments needed.

The Kentucky Child Labor Association urges you to use your influence for the future good of Kentucky.

LAFON ALLEN, President.

Frances Ingram, Secretary.

A woman of beautiful personality and distinguished appearance was Mrs. R. P. Halleck of Louisville, who read a splendid report from the Consumer League of Kentucky, of which she is president, which through its Pure Food Committee, and other committees, is a bureau of collecting and distributing information as to food, clothing, etc., made and kept under proper sanitary conditions. One aim being to start a "White List" of bakers, butchers, milk dealers, etc., and to better the sanitary conditions of the workers by urging the shopping public to trade with the fairest employers, making it financially profitable for other merchants to raise their standards.

The report from the Department of food Sanitation, through its Chairman, Miss Mary Fithian Hatchcraft of Paris, who is one of the ornaments of the Federation in every sense of the word, will be given in full.

Any sumo misbehavior, Mrs. Mason Maury's able report on forestry seems to have been omitted from The Federation Daily, but we yet may be able to obtain it.

THE CIVIC LEAGUE REPORTS

call special attention to the prevention of defilement of streams and waterways, the improvement of river fronts and railroad terminals, the study and use of trees for civic improvement; the getting possession, by stratagem or otherwise, of any vacant lots or ugly, unused bits of city property and sundry touches of boys, and getting them together in any way best calculated to make dirt fly. The offering of prizes in the fly killing contests, and campaign, and the system of garbage cans and garbage collection by the city, seems almost universal, and to have almost rid many towns of these dangerous pests, besides furnishing occupation and spending money for many Junior Leaguers.

We will not make any further report on civic improvements at this meeting, as none of the Civic Leagues seemed to be doing any better than ours is doing for its age, other than to say there seems to be an almost universal tendency for Civic Leagues everywhere to take up the question of a safe and sane Fourth, and in the last very few years since this was begun, the casualties have dropped from over 5,000 to about 1,000 in the United States. We will ask for an expression from our members on this subject before we adjourn.

The report of Mrs. Charles Weaver, rural school organizer, naming Meigs county as the banner county of the state in rural school improvement, was received with much interest.

SCHOOL SUFFRAGE

We now come to school suffrage as the matter immediately in front of us. The power to vote on school questions was conferred on the women of Kentucky by the last Legislature, and thoughtful women everywhere are laboring themselves as to the duty and privilege at once, that they may intelligently discharge the responsibility now resting upon them.

The question is, "Shall we not begin?" Arrangements are being made daily by those officers of the Federation having this matter in charge, and Miss Laura Clay, who has been appropriately and affectionately called "Our Statesman," has promised she will come to speak to us on that subject on July 6th.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. STANLEY F. REED, President.
Mrs. E. L. Worthington, Acting Secretary.

After the reading of the above report, articles from the Women's Club organ, "The Federation Daily," were read as follows: "Homes of Reform"—Mrs. George R. Longnecker.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 26th.—The Democratic National Convention tonight voted to abrogate the rule as to all state delegations except those where the state laws are mandatory on the subject.

This had the effect of giving Woodrow Wilson 19 votes from Ohio and may cause a break in other delegations.

The Progressives in the Democratic convention claimed a notable victory when they carried the motion abrogating the rule by which some state delegations were bound to cast their votes as a unit.

The convention adjourned at midnight until noon Thursday.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. A. H. H. of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body." He goes on to show that the stomach is said to live (through) the stomach. He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes Miss G. M. MURKIN, of Corona, Calif. "I had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat, as it made me worse. When over I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grow strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He is a very kind and grateful."

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM.

KARGER OUTLINES THREE POINTS IN THE CONVENTION

Gus Karger in Times-Star.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 26th.—Standing forth above the turmoil of the convention are these facts:

First—This is a stampede-proof convention. Second—Bryan has shown his maximum strength in yesterday's vote of 579 to 510, and need not be considered in the light of a possible nominee.

Third—Bryan's strength is far in excess of one-third of the total vote, and no man can be nominated for the Presidency without the stamp of his approval.

The gauge marks 81 and falling.
